"Irreplaceable: What Is Family?", is our featured film on movie night, Saturday, February 11 at 7:00p. Every member of the human race has the desire for significance – a desire to belong. And the family is where those deepest longings are fulfilled. Unfortunately, the word “family” has all but lost its meaning in our modern cultural landscape. And the fallout has been significant—Divorce, crime, poverty, addictions and abuse. Our attempts to redefine and reimagine the family only make these problems worse, not better. When the family is weakened, society suffers. But strong families make the world a better place! Travel around the world with our host Tim Sisarich to explore what impacts families most today. Learn how your role in creating and encouraging stable families can transform the world. Through this timely documentary and panel discussion, leading experts such as Dr. Miriam Grossman, Eric Metaxas, and John Stone Street, along with many others, tackle relevant topics such as:

- Is marriage still relevant?
- How important are dads to a family?
- Is “anything goes” sexuality good for society?
- Are male/female differences worth celebrating?

Irreplaceable offers you a message of hope-that it's never too late to become a better father, mother, sister or brother! It's worth it! Due to discussion of teen sexuality, abortion and other mature topics, Irreplaceable is recommended for ages 15 and older.
